

THE RIGHTS OF WOMAN.

The rights of woman, what are they? The right to labor, love, and pray; The right to weep with those that weep, The right to wake when others sleep. The right to dry the falling tear, The right to quell the rising fear; The right to smooth the brow of care, And whisper comfort to despair. The right to watch the parting breath, To soothe and cheer the bed of death; To point, when earthly hopes all fail, To point to that within the veil. The right the wanderer to reclaim; And win the lost from paths of shame; The right to comfort and to guide The widow and the fatherless. The right the little ones to bless In simple faith to Him who died; With earnest love and gentle phrase To bless and cheer their youthful days. The right the intellect to train, And guide the soul to noble aim; Teach it to rise above earth's toys, And wing its flight for heavenly joys. The right to live for those we love; The right to die that love to prove. The right to brighten earthly homes With pleasant smiles and gentle tones. Are these thy rights? Then use them well; Thy silent influence none can tell. If these are thine, why ask for more? Then hasten on to answer for.

LETTER FROM MRS. RITCHIE.

London Notes.—Anecdote of the Queen of Hanover.—Anecdote of the Queen of Denmark.—Manner in which the College was Founded.—Mr. D. D. Home's Appearance at the New Royal Theatre.—Gustave Doré's Illustrations of the Life of King George.—The London riots.—The Emperor Napoleon's visit to London.—The annual dramatic celebration at Dulwich College.

Among the interesting souvenirs of bygone days, preserved in the library of this venerable building, are two pictured panels taken from the state barges of Queen Elizabeth. On the 23d of this month Mr. D. D. Home, after having been for some time announced to appear at the St. James as "Mr. Oakley," in The Jealous Wife, and having withdrawn his name because the part was unsuited to him, appeared at the New Royal Theatre, supported by a distinguished company of amateurs—Mr. Palgrave Simpson, the author of "Broken Ties," etc., Captain Disney Roebuck, Mrs. Williams, etc.—Mr. Home assumed the name of "Londoner Neville," in Pat and Passion. The house was thronged with a highly fashionable audience, chiefly Mr. Home's personal friends, and his reception was rapturous. Justice compels us to say that the expectations of those who had heard his admirable readings and lectures were not realized. Mr. Home was suffering from severe indigestion and overpowering nervousness, but he thought it better to struggle through the performance than to sink in the audience. We were forced to the conclusion, although Mr. Home possesses undoubted talent, the stage is not his vocation. Mr. Palgrave Simpson astonished us by his masterly impersonation of "Esmerald." It was a performance so highly finished, so remarkable for its delicate coloring, so strong in its manifestations of passion, and so full of unexpected points that we do not believe it could have been surpassed by the most experienced London actor. M. Gustave Doré's illustrations have obtained such sudden popularity, has been engaged to supply a series of illustrations to Tennyson's "Idylls of the King." He is to receive one thousand guineas for eight illustrations. The volume is to appear at Christmas, and will probably be the best book of the season. In America, where Tennyson is even more read than in England, it will certainly command a large sale.

Mr. Home who visited Tennyson, lately informs us that the poet was in a state of fierce indignation in consequence of the liberties taken by some American letter-writer, that he had made up his mind to close his doors against the crowd of Americans who venture to call and pay homage to his genius, without any special introduction. A party arrived while our friend was present, but Mr. Tennyson received the cards, not the visitors. We recognized the names as belonging to a family who would have been styled in America "our best people."

The Cosmopolitan, edited by Colonel Fuller, is becoming a power in London. One of the leading statements of Europe is so much pleased with its tone and general character of the articles—especially with those which support the conservative policy of President Johnson—that he has just subscribed for one hundred copies, to be regularly sent to the most prominent diplomatists throughout Europe. We hear that the friends of the leading articles of the Cosmopolitan have been sent as telegrams, translated in various languages, to the principal journals on the continent. It is very rarely that an American is accorded the influential position in London which Colonel Fuller now occupies. The French Academy has given him the honor of being "honorary member" for the next year. "The Death of President Lincoln."

The Emperor Napoleon has been urged to institute a decoration which should be given exclusively to women, for acts of courage, devotion, or charity. It is to be hoped that the order will be called "Euzenie." The noble conduct of the Empress, who walks so fearlessly among the cholera-stricken patients in France, and bears a healing balm with the stimulus of her presence, deserves that her name should descend to posterity attached to such an order. At Nancy she crossed on foot a popular quarter of the city, followed by a crowd, who grasped at her clothes in their enthusiasm, and actually tore her muslin dress. The blue serge straggled for by the crowd—entirely to so, as a relic, a shred of the garment worn by the "Providence blonde." The Empress only smiled, and allowed the destruction. The Emperor also visited the House of Correction for juvenile offenders, at Nancy, and talked to the young culprits, who wept at her kindness. In the afternoon the prefect presented 150 of the ladies of Nancy, while the Prince Imperial received their children, whom he invited to luncheon the next day. On her return to Paris, the Empress was received in the heartiest manner by an immense crowd, which had gathered at the station. The Emperor passed through the throng, and himself opened the door of one saloon carriage, lifted out the Prince Imperial, and kissed him repeatedly. He then handed out the Empress, and took off his hat as he embraced her. The cheering was tremendous. The Empress wore a dress of pink and white striped silk, looped over a petticoat of the same, a black silk waistcoat, and a white bonnet. As usual, the Prince wore a suit of brown holland. The Lancet mentions a lady who has proved herself a veritable Florence Nightingale in the cholera wards of the London Hospital. From the very commencement of the epidemic she has passed her time amid scenes of suffering and death that would try the stoutest heart. She offered her help at a time when, from the sudden increase of patients, such assistance was urgently required. She is very young and very work-hard, there she is to be seen moving from bed to bed, in ceaseless efforts to comfort and relieve—tolling until her limbs almost refuse to sustain her. The Lancet says, "The effect of the late young creator's presence has been that the nurses have been encouraged by her never-failing energy and cheerfulness, so that the dread of the disease has been lost in efforts to combat it. This is an instance of devotion which it would be an insult to praise—it need only be recorded."

Victor Hugo asks £20,000 for his new novel, called "Ninety-Three." ANNA CORA MOWATT RITCHIE. Dubblings. College honors, A. M.'s, D. D.'s, L.L. D.'s, etc., have become so common that anything about these titles is personally interesting to a great number of individuals. The Christian Advocate has a good article on this subject, from which we quote:— The degrees in the "arts," bachelors and masters, are probably of Italian and French origin, dating from the eleventh or twelfth century. Previous to their institution no other distinctions were recognized in the schools than those of master and pupil. The "arts" taught in the colleges of the middle ages consisted of grammar, logic, rhetoric, music, arithmetic, geometry, and astronomy, and proficiency in the first three was recognized as an honorable standing of scholarship, while he who had mastered the whole seven was accounted a prodigy of learning. The degree of "Bachelor of Arts" was instituted by Pope Gregory IX (1227 to 1241), though the significance of the name is not determined, and both the degrees in the arts were conferred at Oxford as early as the thirteenth century, in which the same manner still in use in the English universities and among American colleges. Generally a four years' course of study in actual attendance, or its equivalent, ascertained by examinations, is requisite for the conferring of the first degree, after which the second is given without examinations, at the end of three years longer. Entering upon the first degree was called "commencement," and from that fact the anniversary occasions, when those degrees are conferred, are usually styled "commencements." Though as they usually occur at the end rather than the beginning of the collegiate year, to the uninitiated the name sounds paradoxical. The degree of doctor originated nearly at the same time with the degrees in the arts. The title indicated that its subject had gone over all the studies indicated by the specific title, and was authorized to teach them. The first commencement of a doctor was at the University of Bologna, when Bulgaria was promoted to the doctorate of the civil and canon law.—Legium Doctor, or LL. D. Soon after the same degree was conferred by the University of Paris on Peter Lombard and Gilbert de la Porree, two of the most eminent theologians of that period. In England the degree of doctor was in use in the reign of King John. In Germany during this period a doctor of law enjoyed the same privileges as knights and prelates. The first doctors were of law or theology (Divinitatis Doctor—D. D.); that of medicine (Medicinis Doctor—M. D.); was added during the next century, and the whole system of degrees as now in use was soon after arranged as it now exists. The German universities have instituted the degree of doctor of philosophy, and in England that of doctor of music is sometimes given. "In the universities of Oxford and Cambridge," says the authority just referred to, "and in most European universities, a student who is to receive the degree of doctor has to prepare one or more theses, which in Germany are called inaugural theses. In the United States the title is conferred upon those of eminent learning or ability in their professions, without demanding from them any learned exercise in return." The only question likely to arise as to this statement is, whether the condition of "eminent learning or ability" is uniformly insisted upon. * * * The degree of Master of Arts is given "in course" to all worthy bachelors of three or four years' standing. The degree of Doctor is intended to indicate an advanced stage of proficiency in the specialty indicated, attained to by its recipient. Only two forms of that degree are much used by our colleges, those of law and divinity. Of these the former is given to indicate, not especially legal learning, but rather general scholarship; the latter has by use become rather a clerical than a collegiate degree. By a very recent usage, and of doubtful authority, the degree in laws has been placed above that of divinity, as an object of further ambition for those who have received the theological degree, and accordingly our colleges have taken to adding the LL.D. to the D. D. won by some of our clerics.
